Your Map at a Glance

Your relocation map answers one question: which parts of your birth chart does each place bring forward? Your Sun in Pisces, Moon in Scorpio and Leo Rising stay the same wherever you are. Only the emphasis moves. You chose two lenses, love and partnership and work and public life, and you are thinking about a long-term stay. So this summary leans toward what a place tends to draw out once it becomes the setting of daily life, not just a visit.

The headline. For love and partnership, the line that does the most work is your Venus line on the Descendant, which puts the part of you that values closeness and affection right at the point where you meet people one to one. For work and public life, the clearest single signal is your Sun line on the Midheaven, the top of the chart where vocation and visibility gather, with your Mercury line on the Midheaven running alongside it. One thread runs through the whole report: the Descendant keeps coming up. Your Venus and North Node lines meet you on that angle, and so do the more demanding Saturn and Mars lines near your own places. Your map keeps turning attention toward how you stand with another person.

Love and partnership. This theme gives more room to close bonds: how you give and receive care, set boundaries and share responsibility. The strongest emphasis in this list sits in Rome. There your Venus line on the Descendant runs 72 km away, and your North Node falls in the seventh house of the relocated chart, the house of one-to-one partnership. Next comes Amsterdam, with the same Venus line on the Descendant at 22 km. Marseille, Reykjavik and Glasgow follow. In each of these three, Venus moves into the relocated seventh house, so the emphasis comes through the house rather than a close line. In Marseille and Glasgow your North Node joins Venus there, and in Reykjavik your Moon also moves into the relocated fifth house.

Work and public life. This theme gives more room to vocation, visible contribution and being recognised through what you do. The strongest emphasis in this list sits in Zagreb. There your North Node line on the Descendant runs 33 km away, and your Mars and North Node both fall in the relocated sixth house. Hamburg follows with the same pattern, its North Node line on the Descendant at 12 km. Oslo has Mars and the North Node in the relocated sixth house. Reykjavik has your Sun line on the Midheaven at 80 km and your Mercury line on the Midheaven at 37 km, with your Sun moving into the relocated tenth house. Skopje has Mars in the relocated sixth house. Each list stands on its own, as a set of emphases rather than a ranking of places against each other.

Your own three places. Lisbon, Tromsø and Barcelona do not appear on either theme list, yet each one still foregrounds something real:

- Lisbon sits on your Saturn line on the Descendant, at 60 km. It asks for patience and steadiness in one-to-one bonds and offers the chance to build relationships slowly and on solid footing.
- Tromsø sits on your Moon line on the Imum Coeli, at 78 km, which brings forward the base of your chart, the point of home and inner foundations. That angle is felt most by someone who lives there, which speaks directly to the long-term stay you described.
- Barcelona sits on your Mars line on the Descendant, at 98 km. It brings more energy and directness into how you meet others one to one. That edge asks for some care with friction, and it also opens room for honest, lively partnership, where differences can be named and worked through.

Taken together, your own places echo the rest of the map. Lisbon and Barcelona each put a different planet on the Descendant, while Tromsø turns attention toward the base of your chart. None of them is a verdict. They are three ways your chart can stand in the room with another person, or with yourself.

The central invitation. If you carry one thing away from this report, let it be this: a place does not change who you are; it brings certain parts of your own chart forward. Your map keeps returning to the Descendant, which suggests that how you meet and share life with others is one of the richest questions your chart holds. What you notice there, and what you choose to do with it, belongs entirely to you.

Reading on. If you are new to all this, begin with "How to Read Your Map," then "Your Strongest Lines" and "Lines to Meet with Care." The sections on Lisbon, Tromsø and Barcelona look at your own places in depth. "Other Places Worth a Look" fills in the theme lists above, and "What Changes When You Relocate" shows how the houses shift while your signs stay the same.

How to Read Your Map

- A line marks where, at the moment you were born, a planet stood on the horizon or overhead.
- You do not need to live on a line. Its pull fades with distance.
- Distances are in kilometres: a place is on a line within 300 km, near it from 300 to 600 km, and in its background from 600 to 800 km. Beyond 800 km a line is not counted.
- Support shows how much of what you chose a place's lines bring forward. Intensity shows how demanding they are. They are two separate signals, not one verdict.
- Each line belongs to one of four angles: ASC (how you feel in your own skin), MC (work and direction), DSC (other people and partnerships), IC (home and roots).
- Solid lines are ASC and MC; dashed lines are DSC and IC.

Think of your map as a picture of your birth chart laid out across the Earth. For each planet, it marks the places where that planet was exactly rising, setting, at its highest or at its lowest at the moment you were born. That gives four planetary lines per planet: the Ascendant line (rising), the Descendant line (setting), the Midheaven line (highest) and the Imum Coeli line (lowest, the point beneath your feet). Every line comes from your birth moment, calculated with a high-precision ephemeris, so none of them depends on where you live or have lived.

You do not need to live on a line. A line is a band that fades with distance. Within 300 km it reads as on the line, out to 600 km as near, and out to 800 km as in the background. Beyond that, nothing is mentioned. A place that sits off every line still has its own reading. That reading comes from the relocated chart: your same birth moment recast for that spot, where your planets keep their signs and only the angles and houses change. Your natal Sun in Pisces, Moon in Scorpio and Leo Rising are the same everywhere; what shifts is which part of them is brought to the front.

Each angle tends to put something different forward. The Ascendant is about how you feel in your own skin and come across, and it is noticed even on a short visit. The Midheaven points to work, reputation and direction. The Descendant brings in other people and partnership. The Imum Coeli speaks of home and roots, and it is felt most when you live somewhere. A line always combines a planet with one of these angles, so your Venus line on the Descendant and your Venus line on the Ascendant are quite different emphases of the same planet.

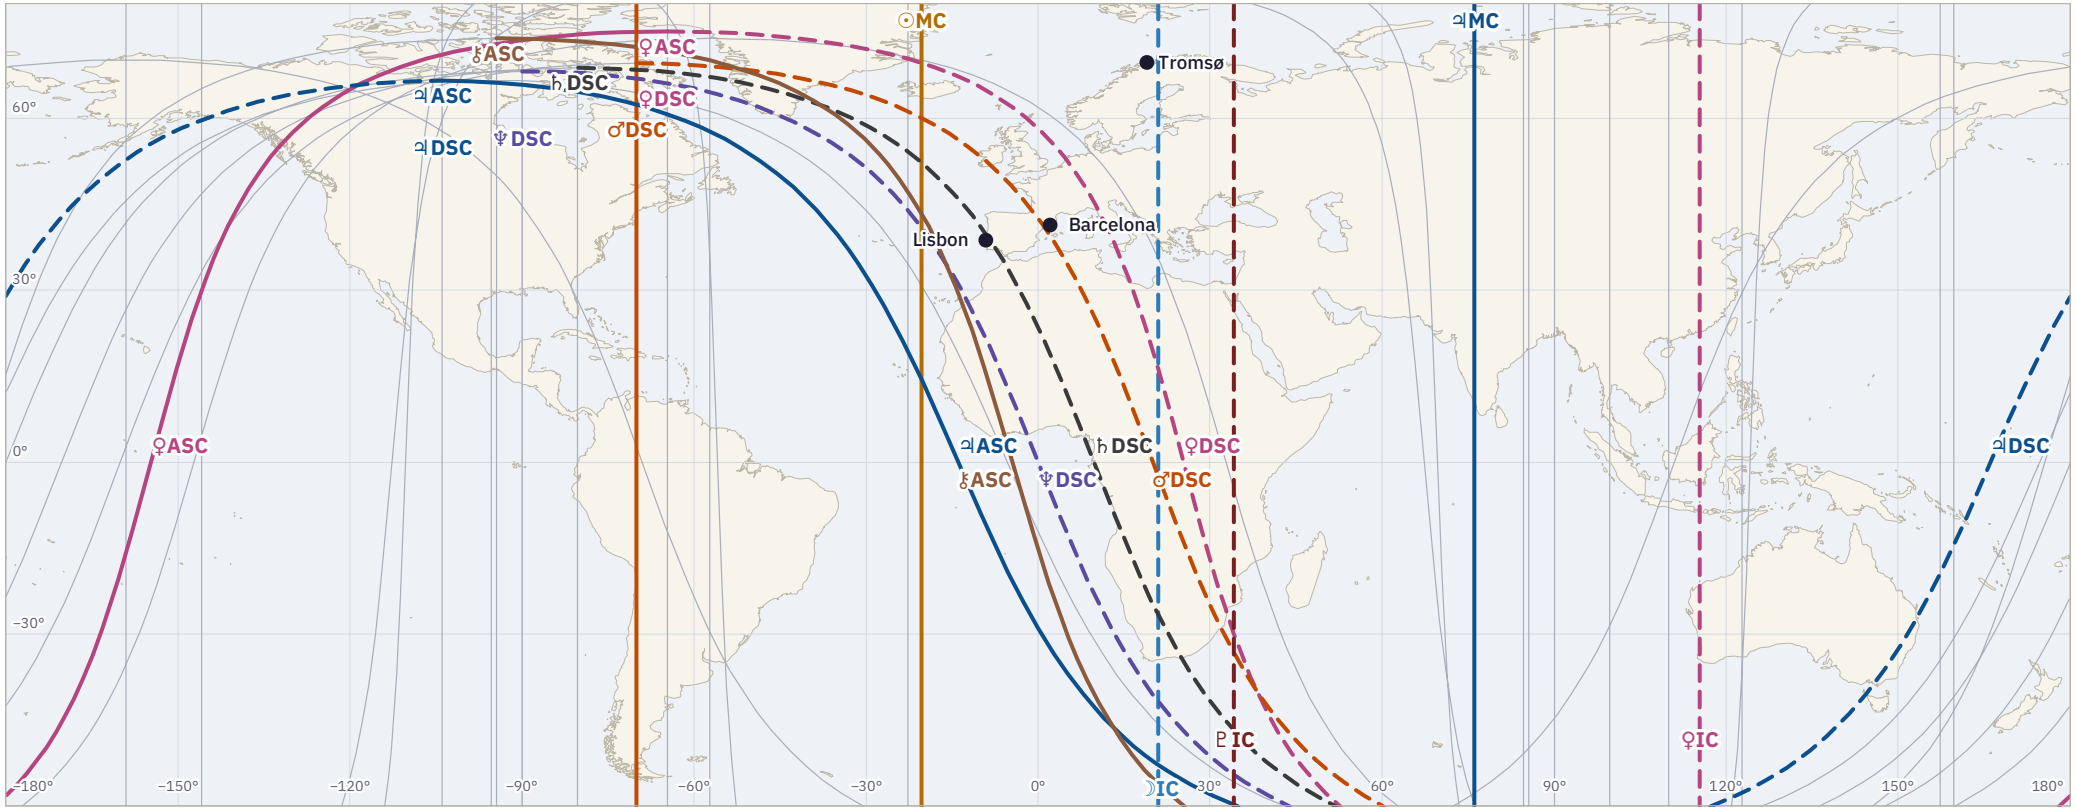

Your own choices set the lens for what follows. You chose two themes: love and partnership, and work and public life. You also told us you are considering living somewhere long term, so the angles that deepen with a longer stay, such as the Imum Coeli, matter as much as those felt on a visit. Each theme has its own separate list of places, and the report never ranks places overall or merges the lists. Three places are read in depth, and nine more are there for you to look at.

This map describes what a place brings forward in your chart. It does not describe what a place is like, and it never tells you where to go.

So the question running through the pages ahead is a simple one: which parts of my chart does each place bring forward?

Your Strongest Lines

The lines below are the natal picture, the global view: each is drawn from your birth moment and stays fixed wherever you are. These are the ones that speak most directly to your two chosen themes, love and partnership and work and public life. As the opening section described, each line is a band that fades with distance, and the places that matter most to you are read in depth in the sections that follow.

Your Venus line on the Descendant carries the most weight for love and partnership. In your birth chart, Venus sits in Aquarius in the sixth house: an affection that values freedom and individuality, and that shows itself through the everyday, in how you make daily routines and shared work warmer. The Descendant is the angle of the other person, the point where you meet someone face to face. A line there puts the part of your chart that governs relating, attraction and shared taste directly in view, so ease with charm and an appetite for harmony tend to become more noticeable in how you connect. Your Aquarian Venus adds an attraction to bonds that honour each person's uniqueness. What it asks is balance. Pleasing others and keeping your own values clear can pull in different directions, and the growth here is turning diplomacy into a skill rather than a compromise. Amsterdam sits 22 km from this line, on the line. Of your own places, only Barcelona carries it, and there it is at 741 km, in the background.

Your Jupiter line on the Midheaven speaks to work and public life. Natally, Jupiter is in Cancer in the eleventh house: a generous, nurturing kind of expansion that grows through friendships, community and shared hopes. The Midheaven is the top of the chart, the angle of public direction and how you are known. This line brings that wish to expand and to offer a generous vision into the foreground of your professional life, making it easier to take up a larger direction and to be seen as optimistic or principled. In return it asks you to pair bold aims with clear discernment, so that your generosity has shape and focus. None of the places in this report lies within 600 km of this line, so it stays a theme in your chart rather than something a listed place brings forward.

Your Sun line on the Midheaven is the other line speaking to work and public life. Your natal Sun is in Pisces in the eighth house. At your core you are imaginative, deeply empathetic and drawn beneath the surface, often finding strength in the depths others shy away from. On the Midheaven, that core identity and sense of purpose move into public view, so how you show up in work, reputation and long-term aims becomes more visible. For a Piscean Sun that prefers to work through feeling and meaning, this visibility invites confidence and leadership, and owning it responsibly is the work the line asks of you. Reykjavik lies 80 km from this line, which the map reads as on the line.

Your Venus line on the Ascendant returns to love and partnership from a different angle. The Ascendant is the point rising on the eastern horizon, the angle of how you feel and come across. Here the same Aquarian Venus moves from the person in front of you into your own presence, tending to make it more graceful and attractive, and this angle is noticeable even on a short visit. The challenge mirrors the Descendant's: letting charm inform your choices without slipping into people-pleasing. Clear boundaries turn this warmth into a resource you can rely on. No listed place lies within 600 km of this line.

Your Jupiter line on the Descendant speaks to both your themes at once. It draws on the same Cancer Jupiter, the one that finds fulfilment in welcoming others, and places it on the angle of partnership. Relationships become a field for widening horizons, and this line tends to make you more open with others and more drawn to people who expand your perspective. Enthusiasm in relating can sometimes overreach, and the constructive work is to temper it with clear mutual boundaries, so that generosity never eclipses reciprocity. Like the Venus line on the Ascendant, this line has no listed place within 600 km of it.

Taken together, these lines show where your chart's warmth and its sense of purpose come forward most. Venus speaks to how you relate, while Jupiter and the Sun speak to how you are seen. Each brings some of your most generous qualities to the front and asks you to give them clear edges.

Other Places Worth a Look

These are places where your two chosen themes, love and partnership and work and public life, come forward. Each theme has its own short list, and each list stands on its own: the lists are never merged into one ranking. These places sit beside your own three, and none of them is a recommendation to go anywhere. Each card names the planetary lines nearby and the relocated Ascendant and Midheaven, the angles of your birth chart recast for that spot.

Rome (IT), listed for love and partnership. Your Venus line on the Descendant runs 72 km away (on the line), and your North Node line on the Descendant runs 401 km away (near). Together they put relating, shared taste and learning through one-to-one encounters in the foreground. The relocated Ascendant is in Leo and the relocated Midheaven in Aries.

Zagreb (HR), listed for work and public life. Your North Node line on the Descendant is 33 km away (on the line), and your Venus line on the Descendant is 473 km away (near). The line closest to hand is the direction of your growth, which here is worked out through partnerships and the way you meet others. The relocated Ascendant is in Leo and the relocated Midheaven in Taurus.

Amsterdam (NL), listed for love and partnership. Your Venus line on the Descendant is 22 km away (on the line), and your North Node line on the Descendant is 350 km away (near). Attraction and ease in connecting tend to be more noticeable, and the North Node line adds an invitation to practise give-and-take. The relocated Ascendant is in Leo and the relocated Midheaven in Aries. For these lines it reads much as Rome does, and there is no real difference to draw between them.

Hamburg (DE), listed for work and public life. Your North Node line on the Descendant is 12 km away (on the line), and your Venus line on the Descendant is 345 km away (near). For this theme, what the place foregrounds is learning through one-to-one encounters, with Venus as a softer accompaniment. The relocated Ascendant is in Leo and the relocated Midheaven in Aries.

Marseille (FR), listed for love and partnership. Your Venus line on the Descendant is 411 km away (near), and your Mars line on the Descendant is 429 km away (near). Charm sits beside a more direct, sometimes sharp-edged drive in how you relate. The growth lies in aiming that edge with clear boundaries. The relocated Ascendant is in Leo and the relocated Midheaven in Aries.

Oslo (NO), listed for work and public life. Your North Node line on the Descendant is 378 km away (near), and your Venus line on the Descendant is 636 km away (in the background), so the Venus line is faint here. The North Node line draws your growth into one-to-one encounters: dependability, listening, and letting others show you unfamiliar possibilities while you keep your own agency. Venus adds only a quiet note of harmony. The relocated Ascendant is in Leo and the relocated Midheaven in Aries.

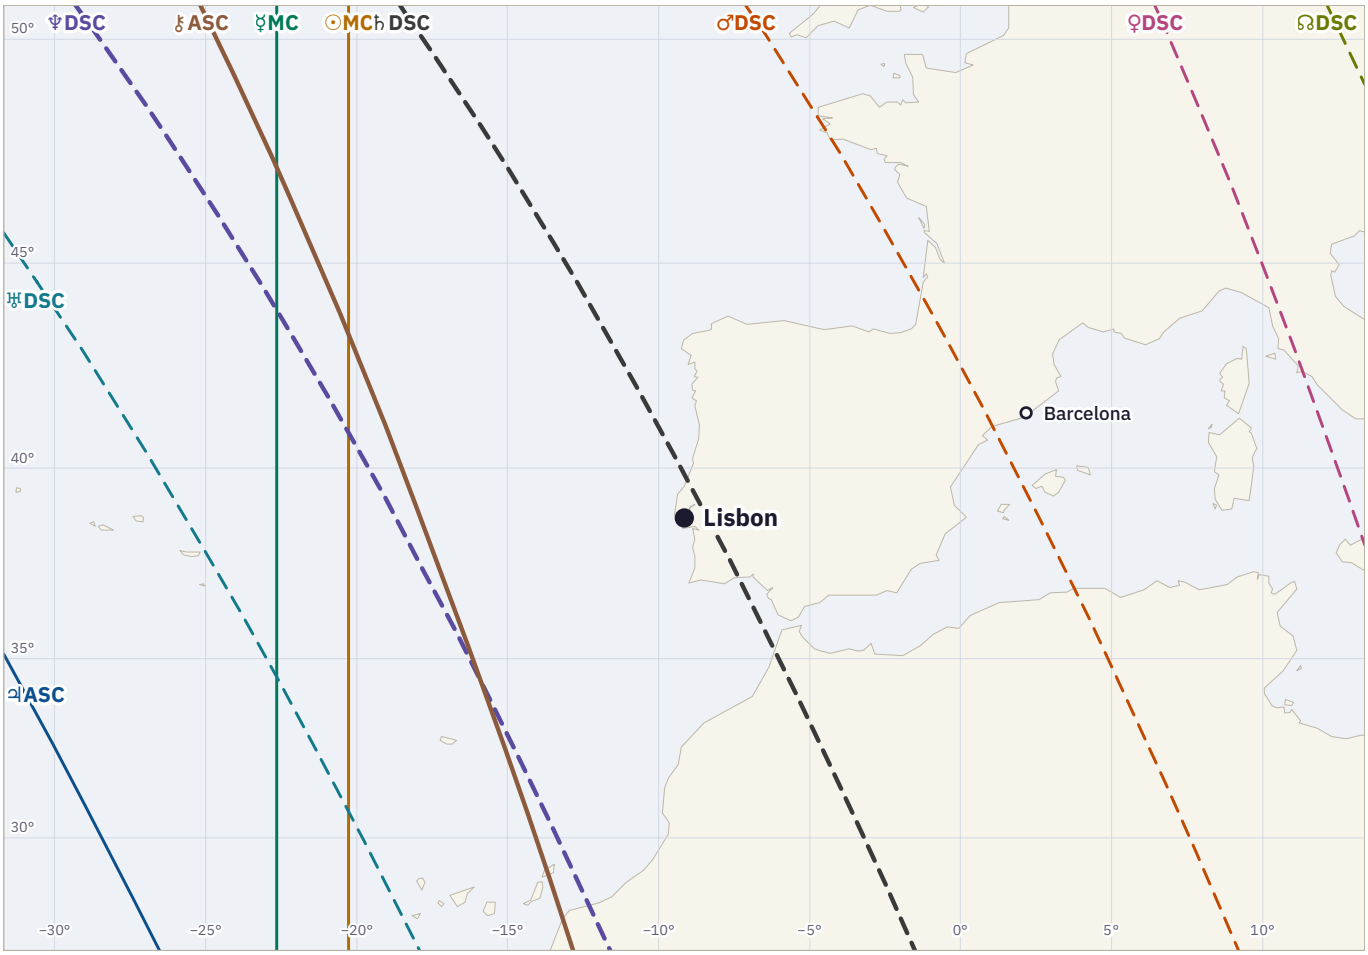

Reykjavik (IS), listed for both love and partnership and work and public life. Your Mercury line on the Midheaven is 37 km away (on the line), and your Sun line on the Midheaven is 80 km away (on the line). These lines put how you think and explain, and your core sense of purpose, into the foreground of your public life. Verbal clarity, curiosity and visible confidence tend to shape how you work and are seen. The relocated Ascendant is in Leo and the relocated Midheaven in Pisces.

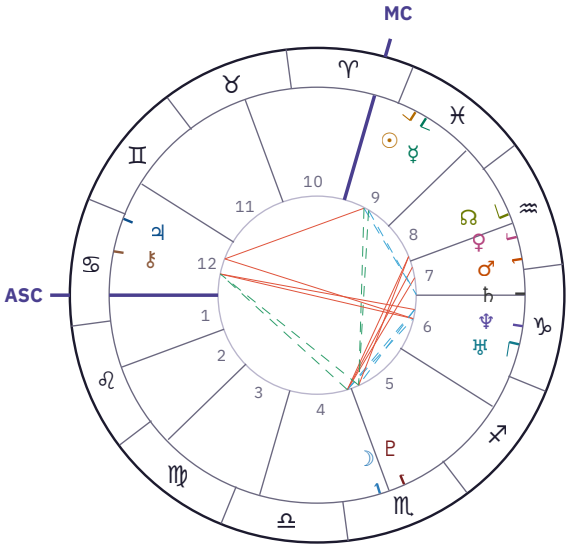

Glasgow (GB), listed for love and partnership. Your Venus line on the Descendant is 355 km away (near), and your Mars line on the Descendant is 466 km away (near). Attraction and initiative both come forward in partnership. The work is to balance pleasing others with honest, clearly bounded action. The relocated Ascendant is in Leo and the relocated Midheaven in Aries.

Skopje (MK), listed for work and public life. Your Moon line on the Imum Coeli is 38 km away (on the line), and your North Node line on the Descendant is 285 km away (on the line). The Moon line foregrounds your emotional needs, home habits and sense of belonging. Because it sits on the Imum Coeli, it is the kind of emphasis felt most over a longer stay. The North Node line draws out learning through one-to-one encounters. The relocated Ascendant is in Leo and the relocated Midheaven in Taurus.

Lisbon

Your Saturn line on the Descendant runs 60 km from Lisbon, which the map reads as on the line. In the chart relocated to Lisbon, Saturn stands within 0.5 degrees of the relocated Descendant, the angle of one-to-one meeting. Of the Descendant lines described under the lines to meet with care, this is the closest.

The section on lines to meet with care already described what this line draws from your natal Saturn in Capricorn. Here the point is how it shapes your reading of Lisbon. Your closest relationships become the main field for Saturn's patience. Commitments, boundaries and shared responsibilities stand out more clearly, and the tone is deliberate rather than quick. What it asks is steadiness, clear agreements and realistic expectations. What it offers is trust built over time, along with practice in balancing closeness with limits that serve both people.

A crossing on the Ascendant. The map also shows a crossing near Lisbon. A crossing is where two planetary lines meet in latitude, and the traditional word for it is paran. Here your Sun on the Ascendant meets your Mercury on the Ascendant, only 0.2 degrees of latitude apart. Both lines fall on the angle of how you feel in your own skin and how you come across, so your identity and your way of speaking tend to show as one. Natally, both Sun and Mercury are in Pisces. What comes forward is your imaginative, empathic core and a mind that works through metaphor and intuition. This blend supports clear, curious communication. It also asks you to temper swift conclusions with patience and to notice which of the two voices leads in a given moment.

Further out, your Chiron line on the Ascendant at 718 km and your Neptune line on the Descendant at 748 km both sit in the background. They are faint threads rather than defining notes. Chiron adds a tender sensitivity to how you present yourself. Neptune adds a quiet idealism to how you relate, on the same angle as Saturn.

The relocated chart. Cast for Lisbon, your birth moment keeps every sign and moves only the angles and houses. Your Ascendant falls in Cancer, which tends to bring forward a sensitive, intuitive way of meeting the world: reading the emotional temperature and leading with care. The growth there lies in balancing that instinct to nurture with enough self-protection. Your relocated Midheaven is in Aries, which colours work and public life with initiative and a wish to carve your own path.

The relocated 7th house carries a strong accent on partnership. Venus and Mars both stand there, beside the Saturn line on the same side of the chart. Venus draws out harmony, fairness and mutual appreciation. Mars adds drive and honesty, and it can stir friction; the work is to channel assertiveness into collaboration where both people feel heard. Both planets are natally in Aquarius, so they bring your love of individuality and originality into one-to-one bonds. Together with Saturn, they sketch relationships asked to be lively and dependable at once.

Home, daily rhythm and wider horizons. The rest of the relocated chart spreads across other parts of life:

- Moon in the relocated 4th house. This ties your emotional life to home and roots and offers a gift for cultivating warmth wherever you live.
- Uranus in the relocated 6th house. This gives your routines and work habits a taste for flexibility and new methods. Daily life tends to feel livelier when there is room to experiment rather than repeat.

- Pluto in the relocated 5th house. This lends depth and intensity to creativity, play and romance. The growth path is to channel that passion into authentic expression rather than a grip on outcomes.
- Sun in the relocated 9th house. This turns your core self toward big questions, study and the search for meaning, and it shines most when you share what you discover.

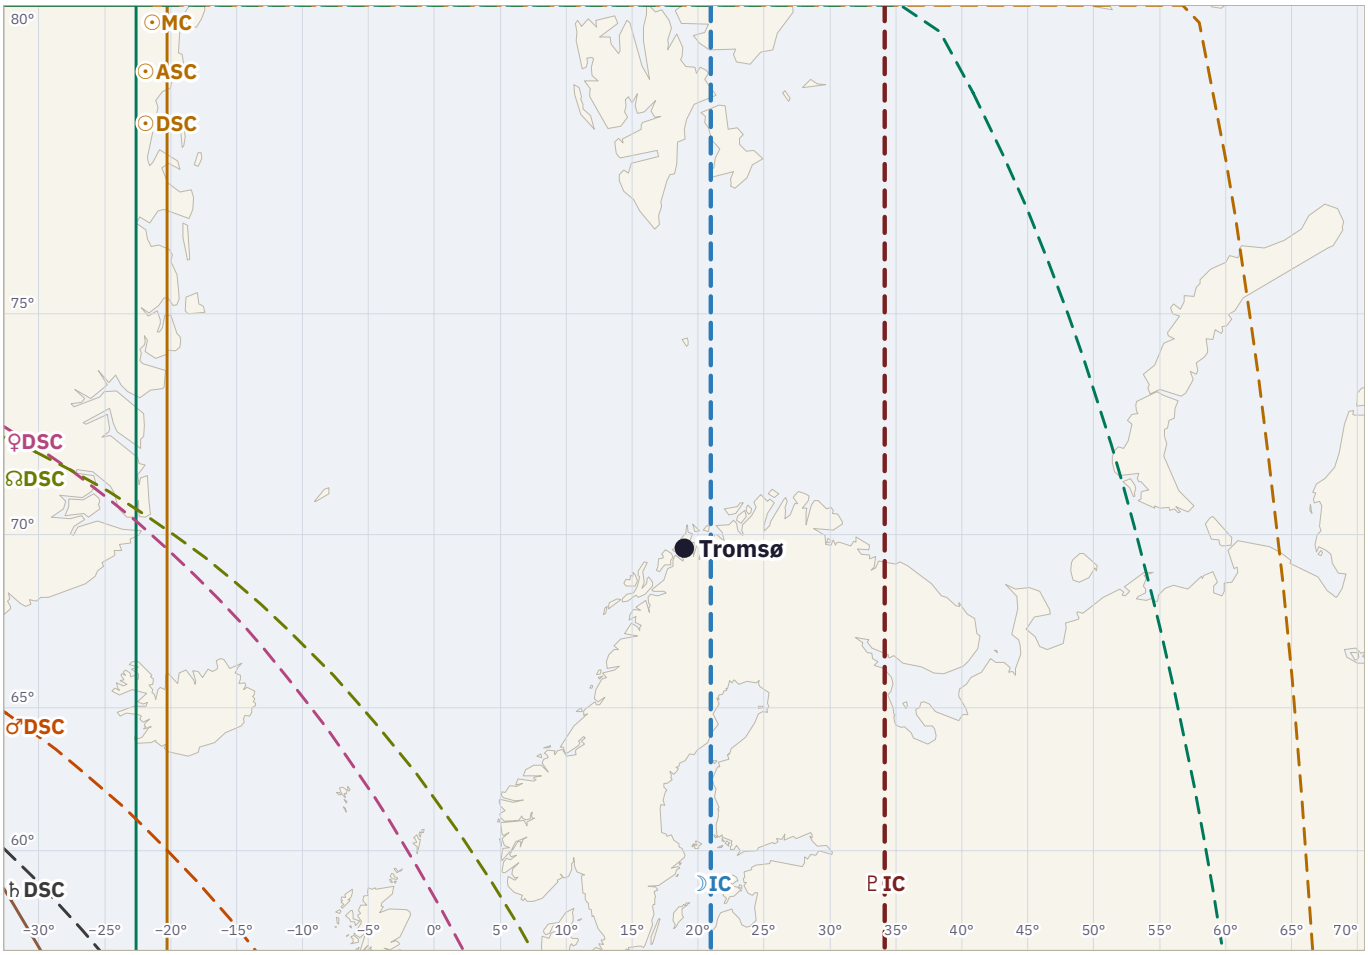

Your Scorpio Moon also sits in the natal 4th house, so the emphasis on emotional roots holds steady here. Your Sun shifts more noticeably. Natally it sits in the 8th house, oriented toward life's deeper layers. Relocated, it leans outward toward far horizons, a different room for the same Piscean self.

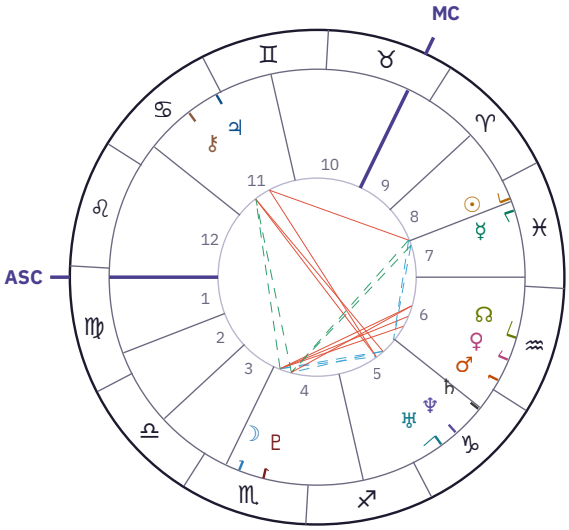

A long stay. You have described a long-term stay, and the parts of this chart surface at different paces. The Sun and Mercury crossing on the Ascendant shows most readily early on, in how you come across and how you speak. The Saturn line on the Descendant tends to deepen with time, because commitments reveal their shape as they are lived. The Moon in the relocated 4th house is felt most once a place becomes the setting of home and daily life. This is a map of emphasis, not a sequence of events.

What asks more. The effort here gathers in close relationships. Saturn on the Descendant asks for patience and clear agreements, Mars in the relocated 7th can bring friction alongside its honesty, and the faint Neptune line adds a pull toward idealism. Together they ask you to be both warm and realistic with the people closest to you. That means expectations spoken plainly and effort given steadily. Your natal Saturn in Capricorn already knows how to build that way; here it is invited to build trust as well as achievement. Work and public life ask less of you in this chart. The Aries Midheaven adds initiative, and the Ascendant crossing gives your voice a clear outlet.

A last note on precision: ten minutes of error in your recorded birth time would move these lines about 218 km. That is more than the 60 km between Lisbon and your Saturn line on the Descendant, so the relocated houses and angles are the firmer reading, and the exact position of that line is the more sensitive one.

At this latitude some bodies never rise or set, so they have no horizon line here.

Houses are cast in the Porphyry system here, because this place is near a pole, where Placidus houses are undefined.

Tromsø

In Tromsø, the part of your chart that comes most clearly into view sits at its very base. Two of your planetary lines run nearby, and both fall on the same angle: the Imum Coeli, the lowest point of a chart, which speaks to home, roots and private life. Neither sits on the Descendant, where most of the demanding lines in this report gather. That gives this reading a different centre of gravity. Here your map turns inward and downward, toward where you live and what steadies you.

Your Moon line on the Imum Coeli runs 78 km from Tromsø, which the map reads as on the line. This line foregrounds your emotional needs, your home habits and your sense of belonging, so that family rhythms and what comforts you become more noticeable in private life. It draws on something already strong in your birth chart. Natally, your Moon is in Scorpio in the 4th house, the house of home and roots. That Moon feels things powerfully and often beneath the surface, and its comfort is closely tied to familiar surroundings and the care of a living space. On the Imum Coeli, that need for depth and emotional safety moves to the front of daily private life. If it exposes old patterns or a quickness of mood, the growth path is to name those needs plainly and to set gentle routines and boundaries that answer them. Your Scorpio Moon's loyalty and resilience have real room to work with here.

Further out, your Pluto line on the Imum Coeli lies 582 km away, in the band the map calls near. As the section on demanding lines described, it draws on your natal Pluto in Scorpio in the 4th house. Here it adds a quieter undertone pointing at the same ground as the Moon line: the deep, private core of home and emotional foundations. It asks for steady inner work and a willingness to release patterns that no longer serve you. In return it opens the chance to reshape your private world with more integrity and purpose, a depth you can build on rather than an ease you are handed.

You are thinking of living somewhere long term, and both of these lines speak directly to that kind of stay. The Imum Coeli is felt most when someone lives in a place rather than passing through. A long stay here tends to put your Moon line on the Imum Coeli first, with the Pluto line as a fainter note beneath it. None of this guarantees a particular experience. It describes where your attention is more likely to gather.

The relocated chart. The relocated chart, your birth moment cast for Tromsø, adds a second layer to the lines. Your signs stay as they are; only the angles and houses shift. Relocated to Tromsø, your Ascendant falls in Virgo rather than your natal Leo. This part of the map is noticed even on a short stay, because the Ascendant shapes how you come across at first. Virgo rising tends to bring a thoughtful, observant eye and a wish to make things better, a precision in how you present yourself and set goals. Its gift is good analysis. Its ask is to balance self-improvement with self-acceptance, since being valued does not depend on being perfect. Your relocated Midheaven stays in Taurus, the sign it holds natally, so your public direction keeps its familiar steadiness: patient progress, tangible results and a reputation built on reliability.

The relocated houses touch both themes you chose. Your Mercury, natally in Pisces in the 8th house, moves into the relocated 7th house, the house of one-to-one partnership. For love and partnership this is the clearest relocated note. A mind that usually thinks beneath the surface and reads subtle feelings tends to come alive in dialogue with the people nearest you, where conversation becomes a way of seeking balance and clarity together. It draws you toward people who stretch your perspective, and it asks you to let that exchange run both ways.

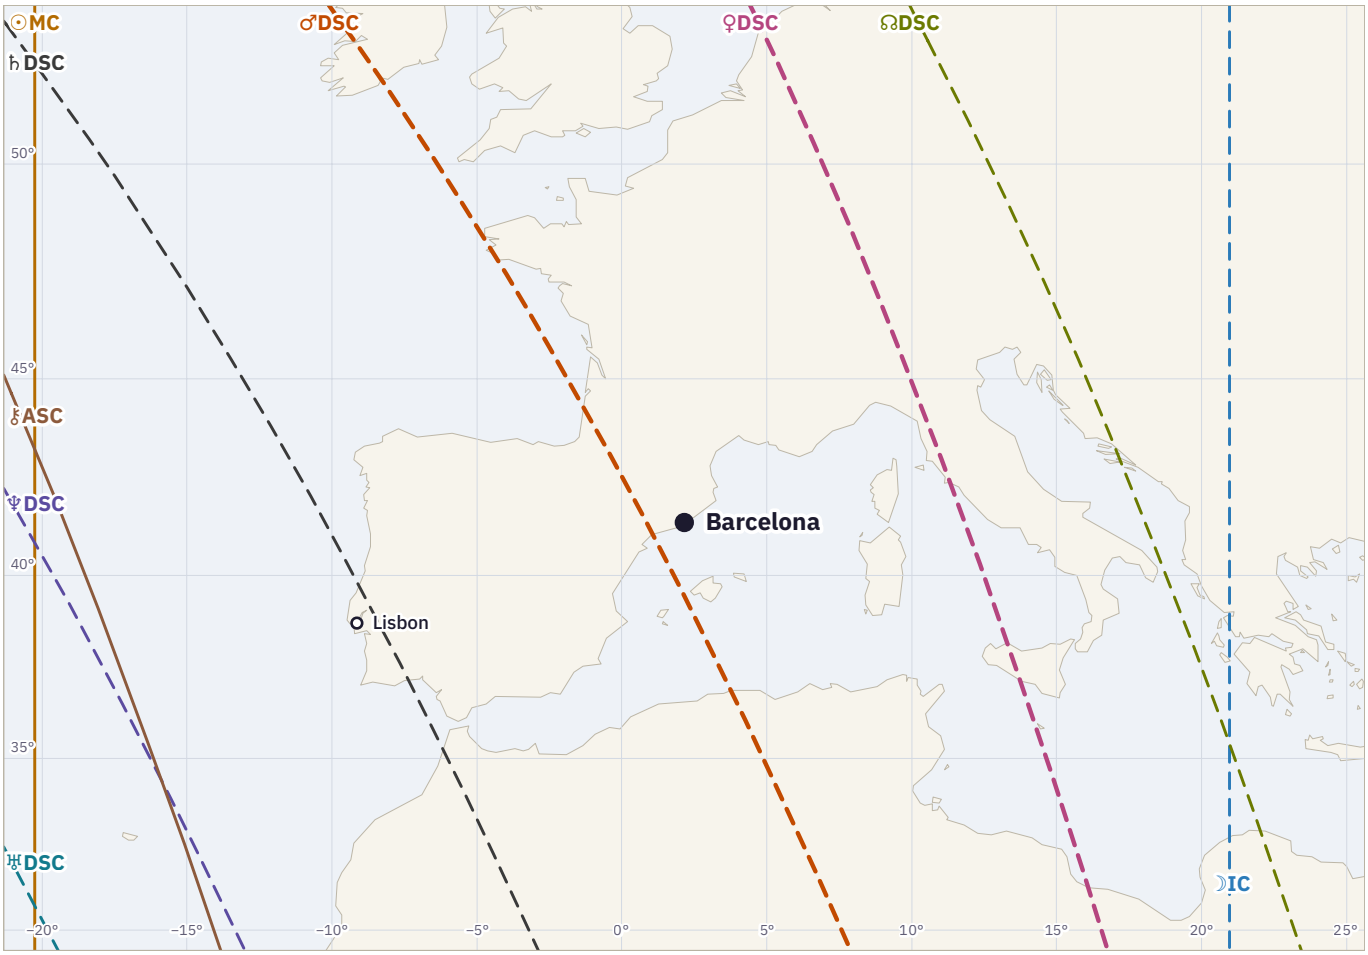

Your Venus and Mars both stand in the relocated 6th house, the house of daily routines and work settings. They sit in the 6th in your birth chart too, so the relocated chart echoes your natal one here rather than shifting it. Venus brings warmth to everyday tasks and colleagues, and Mars brings a practical drive that likes a problem to solve. For work and public life, the working day keeps a familiar shape: pleasant and energetic at once, fuelled by your Aquarian taste for originality and group effort.

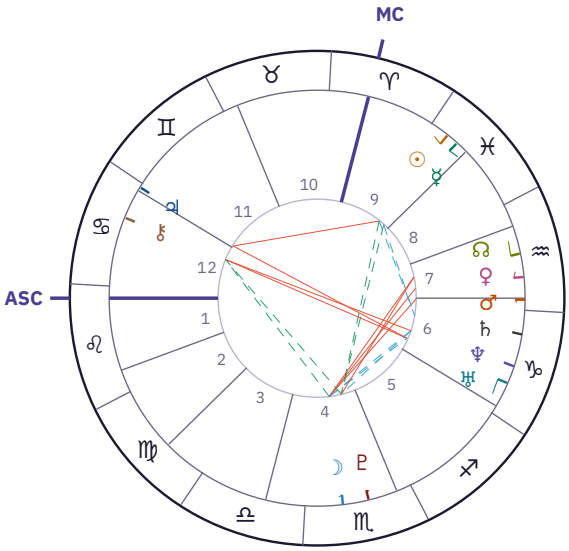

What asks more. Saturn, Uranus and Neptune gather in your relocated 5th house. Uranus and Neptune already live in the 5th natally, while your Saturn moves here from its natal 6th into the house of creativity, romance and play. Saturn there tends to bring a thoughtful seriousness to joy and self-expression, at times a hesitation about taking risks or letting yourself simply enjoy. That effort sits beside the inventive spark of Uranus and the imagination of Neptune. The growth path is persistence and self-acceptance. Your Capricorn Saturn knows how to build brick by brick, and here it can give structure to play and creative work, while Uranus keeps it original and Neptune keeps it fluid. Grounding inspiration in small practical steps is how these three can work together.

At this latitude, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune neither rise nor set at your birth moment, so they have no Ascendant or Descendant line here, only their Midheaven and Imum Coeli lines. That is part of why the demanding Descendant lines found elsewhere in this report do not appear around Tromsø. It is also part of why the emphasis here falls on home and the private self rather than on meeting others across the table.

A calm note on precision: in this part of the map, 10 minutes of birth-time error moves these lines about 97 km. The Moon line's 78 km sits within that range, so it is best held as a strong emphasis rather than an exact boundary. Taken together, this chart brings forward your Scorpio Moon's need for depth and belonging, turns partnership into a conversation, and invites joy to be built as carefully as anything else you care about.

Barcelona

Your Mars line on the Descendant runs 98 km from Barcelona, which the map reads as on the line. In your chart relocated to Barcelona, Mars sits within half a degree of the Descendant, so this is a direct emphasis rather than a faint edge. The Descendant, as the section on demanding lines described, is the angle of how you meet people one to one. Here the way you assert what you want and take initiative with partners, collaborators and close companions comes squarely forward. Your natal Mars in Aquarius is a drive sparked by originality and causes larger than yourself, and this line carries that independent, surprising energy into your closest relationships.

What it asks is real, and so is what it offers. An edge in one-to-one meetings can tip into reactivity. The growth path is to aim that assertiveness with purpose: clear boundaries, honest action, and a willingness to hear feedback. Handled this way, the intensity becomes constructive partnership energy, and your directness can become something others learn to trust.

Further off, your Venus line on the Descendant lies 741 km away, which the map places in the background. It is a soft undertone of the part of your chart that cares about attraction, shared taste and harmony. It may lend a little sweetness to the relational focus Mars brings, but it does not lead.

Two crossings also fall close to Barcelona's latitude. A crossing is a place where two of your planetary lines meet along the same band of latitude; the traditional word is "paran." The first links your Moon on the Midheaven with Neptune on the Ascendant, 0.4 degrees of latitude away. It foregrounds emotional sensitivity wrapped in imagination, making your instinctive needs and sense of belonging more compassionate and more attuned to subtle meaning, and it sets how you come across beside how you are seen in your work. The second links your Sun on the Midheaven with Neptune on the Descendant, 0.5 degrees away. It opens your sense of purpose toward imagination and a reach for meaning, and it shows how the people you work and partner with shape the way you are seen.

Neptune's gift in both crossings comes with a softness around boundaries, a risk that who you are blurs into what others hope you are. The path forward is simple form: steady routines that give inspiration a clear shape, and the practice of naming what you need even when it feels tender to say.

The relocated chart adds another layer. Relocated to Barcelona, your Ascendant falls in Leo, the same sign as your natal Ascendant, so the warm, expressive presence you greet the world with stays recognisably yours. Your Midheaven moves into Aries, giving the part of your chart that speaks to work and public direction a bolder, more self-starting tone: a drive to carve your own path. This echoes the Mars emphasis on the Descendant, so initiative is foregrounded twice, in how you meet others and in how you move in public life.

In this relocated chart, your North Node falls in the 7th house, the house of partnership. That placement describes a growth path of mutual understanding: moving beyond self-sufficiency toward balanced give-and-take and the art of meeting others halfway. In your birth chart, the North Node sits in Aquarius in the natal 6th house, pointing toward collaboration and a broader perspective; relocated to Barcelona, that same Aquarian path turns its focus onto one-to-one relationships. Set beside your Mars line on the Descendant, this gives the reading a consistent thread: the people you meet closely are where much of your chart's attention gathers here.

Your daily rhythm is the other strong area. Saturn, Uranus and Neptune all stand in your relocated 6th house, the house of routines, daily work and the structure of ordinary days. Saturn here can bring high standards for everyday tasks and a pull toward perfection. Uranus wants room for flexibility and fresh methods, so rigid habits may feel confining. Neptune brings imagination and fluidity, which can make clear boundaries around responsibilities harder to hold. These three ask different things of the same small hours, and the growth path is to let each have its place: Saturn's patience to accept your limits and build dependable habits, Uranus's permission to change a method when it stops serving you, and Neptune's invitation to let creativity and compassion into even routine tasks. Your natal Saturn in Capricorn already knows how to build steadily, and that capacity is what this relocated 6th house draws on.

Home and roots come forward through your Moon and Pluto in the relocated 4th house. Both already sit in the 4th in your birth chart, so here this part of you stays where it already lives rather than shifting. Your Scorpio Moon feels things deeply, and its comfort and security remain tied to your living space and private world. Pluto in the 4th adds a stirring beneath the surface of home life that can ask for honest self-understanding, and in return it offers the strength to reshape what security means to you on your own terms.

You are considering a long-term stay, and the 4th house themes of home and inner foundation, along with the everyday texture of your 6th house, are the parts of this chart a longer stay tends to put first. Your Mars line on the Descendant and your Leo Ascendant belong to daily life as well, noticeable in any encounter, short or long. Both of the themes you chose, love and partnership and work and public life, carry clear emphasis here, since relationships and visible direction keep meeting through the Descendant, the Midheaven and the crossings. None of this is set to unfold in a particular way; it describes where your attention may gather.

One property of the map is worth knowing. Ten minutes of difference in your recorded birth time would move these lines by about 209 km, and your Mars line on the Descendant sits at 98 km, so its exact placement depends on how precise your birth time is. What does not depend on it is the question this reading keeps returning to: how might you let directness, care and imagination meet in the relationships and routines you already have?

Your Shortlist at a Glance

Support and intensity for each priority you chose, for the places you named. A computed table, not a ranking.

PLACE	LOVE AND PARTNERSHIP		WORK AND PUBLIC LIFE		NEAREST KEY LINE	BIRTH-TIME STABLE?
	SUPPORT	INTENSITY	SUPPORT	INTENSITY
Lisbon, Portugal	●●○○○	Strong	●○○○○	Present	♄ DSC ··· 60	Shifts
Tromsø, Norway	●●○○○	Strong	●●○○○	Quiet	☽ IC ··· 78	Shifts
Barcelona, Spain Where you live now	●●●○○	Quiet	●●○○○	Present	♂ DSC ··· 98	Shifts

Support dots compare a place with the best places for that priority in your chart: five dots means as strong as the best. Intensity is Quiet, Present or Strong; it is not a verdict.

“Stable” means no line near the place would change distance band if your birth time were off by 10 minutes.

Lines to Meet with Care

Almost every demanding line near the places in this report falls on the same angle: the Descendant, the point on the western horizon of a chart that describes how you meet other people one to one. In your map that is where partnership lives, so these lines connect directly to one of the two themes you chose. Each line below is read as it falls near the places in this report, followed by a note on the natal placement it draws on, which stays the same wherever you are. None of these lines marks a place to steer clear of, and none makes a place unlucky. They show where a part of your own chart asks a little more of you, and what that effort can build.

Mars on the Descendant

Your Mars line on the Descendant appears more often than any other demanding line in this report. It runs 98 km from Barcelona and 263 km from Reykjavik, both on the line. It also runs 429 km from Marseille and 466 km from Glasgow, both near, where the band is still present but softer.

In your birth chart, Mars sits in Aquarius in the natal sixth house. It is a drive sparked by originality and shared causes, an energy that likes practical problems to solve in daily work. This is your own way of taking initiative: inventive, and sometimes surprising.

Where this line runs, that drive moves into the space between you and another person. Exchanges tend to feel more direct and energetic, at times sharp-edged, and your personal drive becomes very visible in how you relate. What the line asks is not to mute that energy but to aim it, with clear boundaries and honest action rather than quick reaction. Worked with, the edge becomes constructive partnership energy: the ability to name what you want plainly and to meet another person's wants with the same honesty. Because the line describes how you meet others, it can show up whether you are passing through or staying longer.

Saturn on the Descendant

Your Saturn line on the Descendant runs 60 km from Lisbon, on the line, making it the closest demanding line in this report. It also runs 716 km from Reykjavik, where it sits in the background, well behind the Mars line there.

Natally, your Saturn is in Capricorn in the sixth house. This is the part of you that builds brick by brick: disciplined, responsible, patient with long projects, and able to turn obstacles into stepping stones.

On the Descendant, that seriousness turns toward partnership. Commitments, boundaries and shared responsibilities become more noticeable, and the tone is slower and more deliberate, favouring clear agreements and realistic expectations over quick closeness. The growth here is real: trust built this way tends to hold, and the line can teach you how to balance closeness with limits that serve both people. Your Taurus Midheaven already favours substance over show in public life, and this line raises the question of how that same preference feels inside your one-to-one bonds.

Neptune on the Descendant

Your Neptune line on the Descendant runs 748 km from Lisbon, in the background. At that distance it is a faint note beneath the much stronger Saturn line there, and it is honest to read it lightly.

In your birth chart, Neptune is in Capricorn in the natal fifth house. It brings imagination and a touch of magic to how you play, love and create, along with the work of grounding dreams in practical steps.

As a line on the Descendant, Neptune leans toward idealism and deep emotional resonance in partnership. Its demand is sensitivity: holding boundaries kindly, turning longing into clear offerings, and telling empathy apart from losing yourself. Your Pisces Sun knows that pull toward absorbing others' feelings well, and staying lucid inside your own generosity is what keeps it sustainable. Because the line is so far out, it is best held as a quiet undertone rather than a defining feature of the reading.

Chiron on the Ascendant

Your Chiron line on the Ascendant runs 718 km from Lisbon and 794 km from Reykjavik, in the background at both. The Ascendant is the eastern horizon of a chart, the point that colours how you come across and how you feel in your own skin. It tends to be noticed even on a short visit, though at these distances it sits softly behind the closer lines in each place.

In your birth chart, Chiron is in Cancer in the natal eleventh house. It is the tender place around belonging, emotional safety and finding your place among friends and groups, and it is also a source of empathy for anyone who has felt on the margins.

On the Ascendant, that tenderness comes closer to the surface of how you present yourself. It asks for steady attention to the more vulnerable parts of you and clearer boundaries around self-expression. Your Leo Rising naturally radiates warmth and presence, and this line invites a quieter companion to that confidence. The growth path is sensitivity turned into practical empathy, a way of showing up that lets others feel welcome because you know what it is to wonder whether you are.

Pluto on the Imum Coeli

Your Pluto line on the Imum Coeli runs 582 km from Tromsø, near. The Imum Coeli is the lowest point of a chart, the part that speaks of home, roots and your most private foundations. Unlike the lines above, this one is felt most when you live somewhere rather than on a short visit.

Natally, Pluto is in Scorpio in the fourth house, alongside your Scorpio Moon. Home and inner life were already the deepest, most intense layer of your chart, the source of your capacity to feel powerfully, to hold on, and to transform what you have been through.

This line draws on that same layer and puts it further forward. It asks for steady inner work: honest self-examination, clearer boundaries in your private world, and a willingness to release patterns that no longer serve you. Worked with over time, it can help you rebuild your sense of security with more integrity, so that home reflects who you have become rather than only where you began.

Seen together, these lines describe one part of you more than they describe any place. Your chart asks for effort mostly in how you meet others, and in one case in how you root yourself, which fits your chosen theme of love and partnership. The drive, the seriousness, the sensitivity and the depth are already yours; a line only brings one of them into sharper focus. What you build from that focus, and whether you engage with it at all, stays entirely with you.

What Changes When You Relocate

Your birth chart is a snapshot of the sky at the moment you were born, and that moment does not move. Cast it for a different place and a good deal stays exactly as it was. The planets keep their signs, and the aspects between them, the angles the planets make to one another, stay the same. Your natal Sun in Pisces and Moon in Scorpio read the same in every place on this map. A place does not change who you are; it changes which parts of your chart stand in the foreground.

What does change are the angles and the houses. As "How to Read Your Map" set out, the Ascendant is the sign rising on the eastern horizon, the way you meet the world, and the Midheaven is the highest point of the sky, which speaks to public life and direction. The twelve houses, areas of life such as home, partnership or work, are measured from those angles. The horizon and the meridian differ from place to place, so the angles shift and the houses shift with them. The same planet can then sit in a different house, or close to an angle, in one place and not in another.

The same chart, cast three ways. In your birth chart, your Ascendant is in Leo and your Midheaven in Taurus. That is the baseline: a warm, expressive way of greeting the world, and a steady, deliberate approach to public life.

Relocated to Lisbon: the Ascendant is in Cancer and the Midheaven in Aries. Cancer rising tends to meet the world with sensitivity and intuition, and Aries on the Midheaven leans toward initiative in public life. Eleven of your twelve planets stand in a different house than at birth, so this is a heavily recast chart. Your Moon stays in the fourth house, while Venus, Mars and Saturn move into the seventh, the house of one-to-one partnership. Saturn stands within 0.5 degrees of the relocated Descendant, a very close angular placement. With your chosen themes in mind, love and partnership is the part of your chart brought forward here, and Saturn's closeness to that angle asks for patience and steadiness in how you meet others. It is something you can build with deliberately.

Relocated to Tromsø: the Ascendant is in Virgo and the Midheaven stays in Taurus, so your public-life emphasis matches your birth chart. Virgo rising tends toward a thoughtful, observant, detail-minded way of presenting yourself. Only two of twelve planets change house, Mercury and Saturn, so this chart stays close to your natal one. The Moon and Pluto remain in the fourth house, and Mercury moves into the seventh. No planet is listed within a few degrees of a relocated angle. The houses here are cast in Porphyry, because Placidus is undefined at this latitude.

Relocated to Barcelona: the Ascendant is in Leo, as in your birth chart, and the Midheaven is in Aries. You meet the world much as you do by birth, while public life takes on the Aries tone of boldness and initiative. Seven planets change house. The Moon and Pluto stay in the fourth house, and Venus and the North Node move into the seventh. Mars stands within 0.5 degrees of the relocated Descendant, a close angular placement that gives energy and edge to how you meet others, and leaves room to practise directness alongside warmth.

These three charts are not ranked. Each simply brings a different part of your chart to the front.

How this relates to the lines. The lines and the relocated chart are two views of the same thing. The lines are the map: they show, by distance, where a planet sits on an angle. The relocated chart is your birth moment cast for one place, showing its angles and houses directly. They usually agree, and sometimes each adds a detail the other does not; neither overrules the other. When you read a place, you can hold both and ask which parts of your chart you would want to notice there.

Working With Your Map

Visiting and living are different. Your map carries two kinds of timing. The Ascendant is felt even on a short stay, because it shapes how you come across and how you feel in your own skin. Your Sun and Mercury crossing on the Ascendant near Lisbon, and your relocated Virgo Ascendant in Tromsø, are the kind of emphasis a visit can bring into view. The Imum Coeli, the point of home and roots, is felt most when someone lives somewhere. Your Moon line and your Pluto line on the Imum Coeli near Tromsø, and the Moon in the relocated 4th house in Lisbon, Tromsø and Barcelona, are the parts of your map that a longer stay gives room to. You told us you are considering living somewhere long term, so those slower, rooted emphases deserve at least as much attention as the quick ones. The Descendant sits between the two: it describes how you meet others, so it can show up on any stay. None of this promises an effect. It describes where your attention may gather.

Using a theme without moving. The parts of your chart these lines point to are already yours, and you can explore them from wherever you are. What follows draws on your natal placements, the ones that stay the same everywhere.

For love and partnership, your natal Venus in Aquarius, which your Venus line on the Descendant draws on, likes freedom alongside closeness. You might journal on a question such as: where in my closest bonds do I please first and say what I value second? Your natal Mars in Aquarius, the edge in your Mars line on the Descendant, invites a quieter experiment: in a conversation that matters to you, you could notice whether your directness opens the exchange or closes it, and what it is like to ask for feedback afterwards. Your natal Saturn in Capricorn, the builder behind your Saturn line on the Descendant, might point toward a conversation about expectations that has been waiting to be had, such as what a reliable agreement between you and someone close would look like.

For work and public life, your natal Sun in Pisces and Jupiter in Cancer sit behind your Sun and Jupiter lines on the Midheaven. You might write about what you would want to be known for if you were seen more clearly, and where generosity needs a shape so that it does not scatter. One small change to your week could be a visible moment of sharing your thinking, which suits a natal Mercury in Pisces that works through metaphor and intuition. Your Taurus Midheaven favours substance over show, so you might ask which piece of work you would be glad to stand behind slowly.

Your natal Moon and Pluto in Scorpio in the 4th house ask for something gentler and more private. An evening that is yours, with a routine that comforts you, is one way to answer your need for emotional safety. A question to sit with is what "a foundation of your own" would mean to you.

How sensitive the map is to the birth time. You gave your birth time as coming from a birth certificate or hospital record. Every map of this kind is sensitive to the minute: each minute of birth time moves every line by 0.2507 degrees of longitude, which is 27.9 km at the equator and 17.9 km at your birth latitude of 50.1 degrees. At the three places read in depth, ten minutes of difference would move the lines about 218 km near Lisbon, about 97 km near Tromsø and about 209 km near Barcelona. This is simply the geometry of such a map, not a reason to doubt the reading, and it is why this report has read lines as bands that fade with distance. None of the crossings listed is low-precision.

Practical factors, once. Work, visas, cost, safety, family and health matter at least as much as any chart in a decision about where to be, and a qualified professional is the right person to help with them.

Returning to the thread. What ties these practices together is the thread running through your map: warmth and purpose that ask for clear edges. Your Venus, Jupiter and Sun bring that generosity forward, and your Saturn and Mars show how to give it form. How you use any of this is yours to decide. Your chart describes emphasis, and you write the script.

Spending a birthday in one of these places? A Solar Return for that city reads the year there.

Method and limits

How your map and your places were calculated, and what this report can and cannot tell you.

- Each body has four lines. Its Midheaven line runs through the places where it was on the meridian at the highest point of its path at your birth moment, and its Imum Coeli line through the places where it was on the opposite meridian. Its Ascendant and Descendant lines run through the places where it was rising and setting.
- Lines are drawn in mundo, from each body's actual position in the sky, including its distance from the celestial equator, and not from its zodiac degree alone. Some maps draw them in zodiaco instead, which can place a line up to several hundred kilometres away for some bodies, so a line in another map may sit slightly differently.
- Twelve bodies are drawn: the Sun, the Moon, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune, Pluto, the true North Node and Chiron. Positions come from a high-precision ephemeris, in the tropical zodiac.
- A line is a band that fades with distance, not a thin stroke. A place counts as on a line within 300 km, near it between 300 and 600 km, and in its background between 600 and 800 km. Beyond 800 km a line is ignored. Crossings, the latitudes where two lines meet, count within 1° of latitude, and are not looked for beyond 66.5° north or south.
- For each place, the chart is cast again for that place at your birth moment. Bodies keep their signs everywhere; only the angles and the houses change. Houses use the Placidus system, and the Porphyry system above about 66.5° of latitude, where Placidus is undefined.
- Your birth moment is the clock time you gave, converted to universal time with the UTC offset printed on the cover. That offset was either calculated from the historical time-zone record for your birth place and date, or entered by you, as the cover states.
- Every line moves with your birth time. A time that is 4 minutes off shifts all lines east or west by about 1° of longitude, up to roughly 110 km. A 15-minute error shifts them about 3.8°, up to roughly 420 km, and an hour, for example a wrong summer-time setting, about 15°, up to roughly 1,670 km. The report states how you told us your birth time was recorded, and its shortlist table marks which places keep their reading across that range.
- This report does not weigh visas and immigration rules, cost, language, safety, health, family, work or your own wishes. These matter at least as much as a chart, and they are yours to judge.
- Positions, lines, distances, scores and the order of places are computed by fixed rules, and the same birth moment gives the same result every time. Only the prose sections are written by AI, from those computed facts.
- The report describes what a place brings forward in your own chart. It gives no overall ranking of places and no instruction about where to go or stay, and it makes no statement about any place itself.
- For at least one place in this report, houses are cast in the Porphyry system because the place is near a pole.

This report is a symbolic reading of your birth chart. It is not a prediction, and not medical, financial, legal, tax, relocation or immigration advice. It says nothing about the safety, cost or legal status of any place, and where you live depends on much that it does not weigh.

Glossary

Planetary line
A curve on the map where, at the moment you were born, a body stood on the horizon, overhead or at its lowest point.

Ascendant
The eastern horizon, where a body was rising. Felt in how you present yourself and feel in your own skin, even on a short visit.

Descendant
The western horizon, where a body was setting. Speaks to other people and partnerships.

Midheaven
The highest point of a body's path. Speaks to work, reputation and direction.

Imum Coeli
The lowest point, opposite the Midheaven. Speaks to home and roots, and is felt most when you live somewhere.

Orb
How far from a line a place still counts. In this report, 800 km.

Distance band
The distance steps used here: on the line (up to 300 km), near (up to 600 km) and in the background (up to 800 km).

Crossing
A latitude where two lines meet, counted within 1° of latitude.

Relocation
Casting your chart again for another place, at your birth moment.

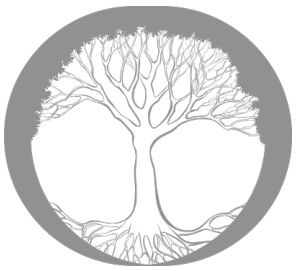

Relocated chart
Your chart cast for one place: the signs of the bodies stay the same, while the angles and houses change.

In mundo
Drawing a line from a body's real position in the sky, not only from its zodiac degree.

Support
How much of what you chose the lines and houses at a place bring forward.

Intensity
How demanding the lines at a place are. A signal of its own, separate from support, never a verdict.

Houses
The twelve sectors of the chart. This report uses the Placidus system, and Porphyry near the poles.
